PUBLISHING AGREEMENT

Canadian Literature (CL) obtains and owns the copyright on the content of its journals. To clarify the rights of the author and Canadian Literature and thus insure the protection of both, Canadian Literature requires that a journal Author formally assign all rights to CL before a review is published.

In consideration of the fact that CL undertakes to publish my Review entitled:

by _____ published in issue no. _____ (provisional).
(Reviewer's Name) (To be assigned by CL)

1. I represent and warrant that I own and have not assigned elsewhere all rights to the Review.
2. I represent and warrant that I have obtained written permission to use any previously copyrighted material that maybe included in Review.
3. I hereby assign and transfer to CL all rights in and to the work, including the worldwide copyright, translation rights, and the right to grant permission to reprint the Review.
4. Without limiting the generality of Article 3, CL may use the Review in any future publication under its auspices, including electronic and/or new media.
5. The Reviewer may use all or part of the Review for educational or research purposes, or in a work under his/her exclusive authorship or editorship subject only to suitable acknowledgement of its first publication in Canadian Literature.
6. CL agrees to notify the Reviewer of requests to reprint wherever possible with the exception of requests from educational institutions for copies for classroom use. It is the Reviewer's responsibility to inform Canadian Literature of any address changes.
7. Without limiting the generality of Article 3, CL may make minor cuts and emendations without consultation.
8. Upon publication, the Reviewer will be provided with a copy of their material as it appears in the journal.
